The Happiest Place on Planet Earth

Picture your happy place in honor of the International Day of Happiness on March 20. Now, picture the eight-time winner of happiest country in the world: a nation partly located in the Arctic Circle where neighborhoods go days without sunlight. So, what is Finland doing right?

Sisu. Finns value “sisu,” a cultural concept that embodies perseverance and competence in the face of adversity and taking risks even when failure seems imminent. Of course, while the word “sisu” is Finnish, the underlying concept transcends national boundaries, and anyone can benefit from values of grit, willpower and resilience.

Sauna. There are 5.6 million people and 3.3 million saunas in Finland. Most Finns use the sauna at least once a week, making sure to shower before entering, and staying inside the sauna for multiple short periods of about 10 minutes, punctuated by cooling breaks with a cold shower or even a roll in the snow!

Scenery. Snow or shine, Finns prioritize being outside. During winter months, many people still bike to work, and some parents even trade strollers for sleds to take their kids to school.

International Day of Happiness is March 20.

1918: Daylight saving time is enacted nationwide and time zones are set when the Standard Time Act is signed into law.

1941: The pioneering squadron of African American military aviators known as the Tuskegee Airmen is activated for service in World War II.

1959: Barbie makes her debut at the American International Toy Fair in New York City.

1962: In a historic NBA game, Wilt Chamberlain of the Philadelphia Warriors scores 100 points playing against the New York Knicks. It's still the record for most points scored in a single game.

1974: People magazine debuts. The popular celebrity news publication's first issue featured actress Mia Farrow on its cover.

1987: To recognize and honor the achievements of American women, Congress declares March as National Women's History Month. The observance began in 1980 as a weeklong celebration.

2006: Using an early version of Twitter (now called X), the world's first tweet is posted. The social networking platform went live to the public later that summer.
